

Human Bingo for Peacemakers

Sometimes we understand people and can get along better when we know more about them and what their lives are like. Your task is to move around the classroom asking your classmates these questions. Ask a different person each question. Write the name of the person who answered the question in each square. Don't be lazy! Take a chance and talk to people you don't already know well. You might learn something interesting and surprising.

Who lives at your house?	Do you have a pet? What kind?	What is your favorite book?	What talent do you have that few people know about?	Have you ever been to summer camp? Where?
What are your hobbies?	Do you collect anything? What?	What's the farthest place from here you have ever been?	What do you want to be when you grow up?	Name two people who are your friends.
Who is your favorite relative? Why?	What chores are yours to do at home?		Name something you did that you're proud of.	Tell about something sad that happened to you.
What kind of music do you like?	Do you have a favorite sport? What and why?	Name something your family likes to do together.	Name something you know how to cook.	Do you have a nickname you like? What is it?
What's the best present you ever received?	If you could go anywhere in the world, where would you go and why?	Name someone you think is a hero.	What do you and I have in common that we didn't know before?	Do you know any languages besides English? Which ones?
